The pirates, on the other hand, noticing the barge—the launch could not come nearer the shore for want of waterdischarged a volley against the police, which showed that they were in large numbers and more than the Police could fight, and the latter had to beat a retreat maintaining a covering fire. There were no casualties on the part of the Police, but the barge was found to be riddled with bullets. It has not been ascertained whether the pirates suffered any loss. Independente goes on to say that it appears that the conflict took place outside Portu guese jurisdiction, but even so it thinks in such cases it would be convenient to assemble all launches and raise a siege, which would not be difficult around a small island. is probable that the Chinese Authorities would co-operate in the destruction of the miscreants, but at any rate, to combat them does not amount to usurping territorial rights, the English and Partuguese have both suppressed pirates in Chi nese territory without remonstrance from China When dealing with pirates, international rights are modified by circumstances. "We are of opinion," says our contemporary, "that it would be of great advantage that our Government in accord with the Chinese authorities on the measures to be adopted when the evil-doors are, as at present, gathered in large numbers on ground where there are no pretectors of the: public. JUBILEE CRICKET MATCH

A match between the Officers of Her Majesty' Army, Navy, and Civil Services and the Hongkong Cricket Club was played on the Cricket Ground yesterday, terminating in a draw slightly in favour of the Services. The Indian Statesman of the 25th ult. says :-The stranding and consequent loss of the British-India Company's steamer Arcat, was due to the audden giving way of her steering gear. At the time of the accident at 1.85 p.m., the vesse was in charge of Mr. Paulson, senior master pilot, who boarded her at the Sandheads. Every thing seems to have gone well till she entered the eastern gut of the "James and Mary" in No. 4 track. The steamer was going full speed ahead, and the officers and orew were at their respective stations, when in rounding the Waterloe-wreck buoy, the pilot noticed that her head was paying off towards the Muckraputty Lumps The captain at the same time, sang out that the steering gear had carried away. The vessel becoming unmanageable, orders were immediately given to let go both anchors, but as she had a lot of way on, and owing, moreover it seems, to a defect in one of the links, the chains parted before the vessel's head could be brought to the tide, and so she drifted rapidly on to the Lumps, touched the sand, and heeled over to port in an instant. There was a rush then for the starboard side of the vessel, and on the passengers and crew collecting together, handkerchiefs were waved as signals to the steamers Armenia and Clan Matheson, which were crossing the Bar at the time, for assistance. Of course these vessels saw the accident, but apparently they couldnot then, without imminent danger to themselves, have remained near the James and Mary, while to have lowered their boats without stopping their engines would have been to swamp them. The conduct of the two steamers, in making no attempt of any kind even to lower a boat, has not unnaturally been the subject of muchunfavourable remark among these whose lives were in such imminent peril. Several native craft which were about at the time were also signalled, but neither did they offer any assistance. So far as we have been able to ascertain, happily, only five persons, (natives, who jumped overboard when the ship struck and canted over) have been drowned. Four of these, two lascars and two firemen, formed part of the ship's crow, the fifth man being the chief officer's servant. Mr. McKay, the chief officer, had a narrow escape himself. He was on the bows attending to the anchor when the vessel struck, and was thrown overboard, but managed to save himself. rest of the passengers and crew were all saved, though their's has been nothing short of a miraonlone deliverance. Mr. Paulson, the pilot, affirms that he saw only two men drowned, and believes it to be very likely that others who are given up as lost, drifted down the river, and were picked up by some of the native boats. This is, however, but a forlorn hope at best, we fear.

I feel certain that the Board of Revenue will not agree to stop the cultivation of the poppy; and is rumoured that the rejection of the Masso Treaty has something to do with this, and also the extra territory that Portugal wants near Maczo. This I believe to be a fact.

Mr. Chamberlain, M.P., addressing a meeting at Belfast last night, said he was willing to concede that a great extension of local government in Ireland should be granted, but a distinct recognition of separate nationality amounted to absolute independence, as the ties between England and her colonies without federation were only temporary.
